The Restaurant:

Under Chef Michael Glatz's direction, The Delmonico Room at Hotel Fauchère seats 80 and boasts a traditional yet modern menu with natural ingredients obtained from local and regional producers and the owner's own organic farm. The restaurant's décor includes a collection of European menus from the 1920s. Hotel Fauchère guests receive priority reservations.

The Lounge:

The downstairs bar and lounge, Bar Louis, features the photography of artist Christopher Makos, whom Andy Warhol called "the most modern photographer in America." Works by Makos on display include a black and white candid shot of Warhol as well as photographs from his "Hilton Brothers" collection. Bar Louis has a cabaret and live performance area. In the original Hotel Fauchère, Bar Louis was known as The Chicken and the Snail.
